Where's the Curfew? Crittenton Circle Asks City Officials

What has become of the curfew? This is a question which the women of the Florence Crittenton circle brought up Wednesday afternoon at their monthly meeting at the home of Mrs. George Heideman, 1307 Lincoln way E. For more than a year the curfew, required by city ordinance to ring every evening at 9 o'clock, has not rung. In the opinion of the circle it is important that the custom of ringing it be revived, especially now that the season is approaching when children will be tempted to run the streets after dark. A committee was accordingly appointed to see the proper authorities to urge that the curfew again be rung.

The principal feature of the afternoon was an address by Rev. C. A. Decker of the First Baptist church, in which he urged the violation of curfew laws in South Bend and the lack of law enforcement to indifference on the part of the South Bend public. "It doesn't make any difference how good a city administration may be, it has to be backed by a public which is constantly alive and interested in the situation. The heat of one campaign will not keep a city clean."

Mr. Decker's talk was full of inspiration for the members of the Florence Crittenton circle whom he complimented for their bravery in undertaking a work which most men would not do on account of business reasons.

Mrs. H. E. Willett contributed several piano numbers to the program and Mrs. O. E. Julian gave a vocal solo. The society will meet again the third Wednesday in May when it will be addressed by Rev. John Alexander of the First Christian church. The place of meeting has not been decided upon.

REV. W. H. FRESHLEY AGREEABLY SURPRISED

Told Couple Wants to See Him, But on Arriving at Church Finds Congregation There.

Rev. W. H. Freshley, who came to South Bend from Kendallville to take charge of the First Church of the Evangelical association, was pleasantly surprised on the occasion of his last night at Kendallville. He was called to the telephone and told a young couple wanted to see him at once at the parsonage on Monday night. Expecting to see some eloping couple awaiting him at the church for immediate marriage he hurried over. He was asked to go into the church which was in darkness. He was about to turn and fly fearing some foul plot might be on to take his life, when the lights were suddenly switched on and he found the church filled with the members of his congregation.

The retiring pastor was made the recipient of many useful and valuable presents after which the congregation enjoyed a social time.

A Few Hints On Wise Marketing

Know What You Want and See That You Get It—Don't Cook Too Much.

A small volume could be written on sensible economies in dress. Clothing of good quality, that is beautiful and suited to the wearer, does not go out of style quickly, while the ugliness of an ultra, unbecoming style may become apparent to every one the next day. However, only 10 to 20 per cent of the income is spent on clothing, while the percentage for food begins at 20 per cent for the generous income and runs up to 50 or 60 per cent of the very limited income. It would be easy to prove that both nationally and individually the prevention of waste in food materials is most essential.

A few simple rules in marketing are worth keeping in mind. First, the housekeeper must know the needs of her family, and be sure that all of the food purchased can be utilized. Buying an extra article because a better price is thereby obtained, and then allowing a part of it to waste, is as foolish an investment as that of the woman who at a sale purchased a door plate with the name of John Smith, with the risk that one of her four daughters might need such a plate some day.

When assessed of the amount she needs, the marketer's next need is to see that she gets it. The extra fraction of a pound that is often sold and charged may easily become a loss. In buying from any one source, the dealer, a pair of scales is essential. Many of the cut prices owe their extreme lowness to short weight or measure. A good scale costs about $1, and this sum can be saved by its use in a very short time.

Buying out of season, paying for such unnecessary factors as the polish on pecans, the bleaching of flour, the "color" in eggs, all mean an outlay of money that is not in proportion to the food value or other conditions desirable in the food supply, although spending money for such things may result in an actual waste of the food. Buying in bulk or in small packages may either one become a waste in time, money and food. The article in bulk may be inconvenient to store, it may deteriorate in quality and it may be wasted in the home, so that the real saving may be a minus quantity. The reverse condition may just as easily be true.

However a housewife obtains her food supply, whether it be by raising, preserving and curing at home, or by going, not telephoning, to the delicatessen shop or to public market, there will always be the problem of the leftover food. The fashion of serving beautifully in a very few dishes is an important step in the decision of the waste of food. The many dishes part consumed, too commonly seen on the table today, would have caused distress to our more frugal ancestors and probably will be obsolete in a few generations educated to believe in conservation as a guiding principle. Even with a few dishes there will be waste unless the individual at table shows his appreciation of conservation by not desiring the food which he does not desire. The growth of the a la carte system of service in public places is a sad commentary upon an unfortunate tendency. Because the payment for a meal tempts one to order twice what one can eat and three times what is good for him makes some people forget that it is just this waste that keeps the price of the meal at such a high level.

Hotel as Example. There is a semi-private club in the Adirondack mountains noted among other things for its practical contribution to the preservation of institutional food, and also for the genius displayed in the "elimination of non-essentials," with the retention of all the comforts that modern life requires. The members are serious in their study. Recently a guest, knowing of the management's belief in the practice of wise conservation, ordered several meals with the idea of noting the amount of waste. The orders were ample, but so moderate in size that the waste was a small quantity. The guest, in speaking of the matter later, said that he was glad to see that this institution departed from the custom of serving such large orders of food that the guest is tempted to eat only a little of the very best portions. Another hotel manager says that the price of a dinner in his hotel has to be made sufficient to pay for all the glasses, because the greater number of them are broken by the extra help on such occasions. Still another manager says that the cost of dinner must include the silver taken by the guests. Until guests, employees and institutional managers realize that whatever encourages or increases needless destruction must ultimately raise the cost of waste will continue to exist.

IS YOUR NAME IN THE LIST BELOW?

If it is, you are invited to the next News-Times Birthday Party. Trips to all theaters and refreshments will be on the program.

The News-Times has compiled a list of all school children in both the public and private schools of South Bend and Mishawaka. These names were taken from the best records obtainable, and if the name of some boy or girl was left out, we feel that we are not to blame. These names will appear regularly in The News-Times. Today we publish the names of all school children whose birthday falls on this date. Tomorrow we will publish a list of children whose birthdays occur tomorrow, and so on until, we hope, every school child in South Bend and Mishawaka has received a birthday party ticket.

Besides publishing the names of children whose birthdays occur on the date of issue of the paper, we will each day publish the names of at least five children whose birthdays fall some time in the future. These names will also be published on the date of their birthdays. We will advise a careful watch kept on the daily announcements, as these children will receive two treats. The names of the lucky ones are taken at random and there will be absolutely no favoritism shown.

It is not necessary that the child's parents be subscribers to The News-Times, as there is absolutely no obligation attached to this offer. The birthday party ticket entitles the holder to admission to the Orpheum, Majestic, LaSalle, Surprise and Colonial theater, also a treat at the American drug store. Children living 10 or more blocks from the office will receive a return car ticket home.
